EN 1149 Protective Clothing - Electrostatic Properties

A European standard that defines the electrostatic properties required for protective clothing used in environments where static discharge could ignite flammable atmospheres or damage sensitive equipment.

IEC 61482-2 Live working - Protective clothing against the thermal hazards of an electric arc

An international standard that defines the requirements and test methods for protective clothing designed to safeguard workers against the thermal hazards of an electric arc. It ensures that garments can withstand the intense heat, flames, and molten metal generated during arc-flash events, helping prevent serious burns and injuries for those working near energized electrical equipment.

EN ISO 11612 Protective clothing – Clothing to protect against heat and flame

A widely used international standard that specifies the minimum performance requirements for protective clothing designed to shield workers from heat and flame hazards. It applies to garments offering limited flame spread and protection against radiant, convective, and contact heat as well as molten metal splashes, making it suitable for a broad range of industrial environments.

GRAPHENE TECHNOLOGY

NEXT GENERATION WARMTH AND CLIMATE CONTROL

Graphene infused lining enhances thermal retention for superior insulation, effective heat regulation, and lasting comfort in cold envirionments.

Graphene regulates temperature by distributing body heat uniformly across the fabric, avoiding hot spots and cold zones. This powerful yet passive thermoregulation technology operates at the atomic level to regulate heat, making it ideal for clothing designed to adapt to fluctuating environments.

AS 4602.1:2024 HIGH VISIBILITY SAFETY GARMENTS

The Australian standard that sets out the requirements for high-visibility safety garments used in high-risk environments where workers may be exposed to moving traffic, machinery, or plant. The 2024 revision expands the garment classification system by introducing defined levels within Class N and Class D/N garments, based on the amount and placement of high-visibility materials across the body—including, for the first time, the legs and lower portions of coveralls—to ensure more accurate matching of garments to varying operational hazards.

UPF Sun Protection

This product complies with AS/NZS 4399:2017, AS 4399:2020

UPF – What does it mean? Ultraviolet Radiation, or UV is present in sunlight. Sunburn is a sign that your skin has received too much sun. Over exposure to UV over many years may cause serious health problems such as skin cancer and cataracts. Garments that are sensibly designed for sun protection reduce your UV exposure. It is often difficult to tell if a fabric offers good sun protection. The Ultraviolet Protection factor (UPF) shows how well a fabric protects your skin from solar UV and lets you select sun protective clothing with confidence. Remember that the garment only protects the skin it covers, protect other areas by wearing a hat, sunglasses and sunscreen and use shaded outdoor areas. UPF ratings range from 15 to 50. Fabrics that rate higher than 50 are labelled UPF 50+.

PART 1: TERMINOLOGY AND PERFORMANCE REQUIREMENTS FOR CHEMICAL RISKS:

The chemicals break through the glove material at a molecular level. The breakthrough time is here evaluated and the glove must withstand a breakthrough time of at least:

Type A – High protection, with a permeation resistance of at least 30 minutes for at least 6 test chemicals.

Type B – Medium protection, with a permeation resistance of at least 30 minutes for at least 3 test chemicals.

TYPE A
ABCDET

TYPE B

EN ISO 374 - 1
TYPE B
